Chairman Powell:

Dear Sirs;
Thank you for asking my opinion on TV Violence.
Watching TV these days is a risky business for my family. I strongly urge you to reduce and limit the graphic display of violence on TV. I, as well as, many of my friends have discussed this situation and are frustrated by these shows and even more so by the commercials that they show. Filters and parental supervision are necessary but when these graphicly violent shows then advertise through TV commercials, its like a surprise attack on my family. I strongly urge you, as representative of the families of the USA to strongly limit this type of TV programming and advertising.

Sincerely,

Laurene Rosen

Commissioner Abernathy:

We have two children and as concerned parents, we do not turn the TV unless the children are fast asleep. There have been times we have wanted to watch the morning news or see a show in the evening. However, everytime we have attempted to view something, the images that come across the screen (including commercials) are very disturbing and we have never made it past the first five minutes. Although we do not watch a lot of TV, it would be nice to sit down and enjoy an occasional program with the children without feeling like a guard dog over what is being shown to them. The violence and sex on both the shows and commercials is soo saturated into everthing that, except for videos carefully chosen, we do not allow any television for the children and many times for ourselves.

Sincerely,

Dear Commissioners,

Thank you for this opportunity to voice our opinions concerning television violence. As adults and parents we believe the level of violence shown is irresponsible and debase. The lack of restraint shown by the networks is clearly an attempt to lower the value of human life. As a country we must consistently remind and challenge ourselves to mature and hold each other accountable, especially on behalf of future generations. The statistics and facts prove that violence harms not only the victims but those exposed to its affects; therefore we must change the direction of what we view as 'entertainment'.

Thank you for allowing us to write and express our thoughts. Change only comes through those who are willing to act; may you have the courage and insight to follow what is best for our nation.

I would like to see FAMILY FRIENDLY television programming!!! I believe I am not alone in this view. Our family has very strict TV guidelines, including the "cartoons" our children can watch. We would love to be able to sit down in the evening and watch decent programming with good morals.

I am an early childhood student and also a teacher in the field. We know that children learn by repetition. We also know that children learn through their senses. Seeing and hearing something repeatedly results in learned information and learned behavior. Many (probably most) parents are not guarding what children watch on TV nor do they talk about or explain things that children see on TV. Young children cannot distinguish between reality and pretend. There are many, many, many shows on TV today that I would not allow children to watch. I believe that the values espoused on many of these shows are affecting the thinking, attitudes and behavior of adults and impacting the scope of societal problems. How much more must young children whose brains and understandings of life are developing be impacted! I don't believe that it is ever too late to make changes, but the longer we wait the harder it will be to change.
